In just a few weeks, on the 14th of Feb., we celebrate Valentine’s Day. A time we are prone to think of love as affection, sentiment, attraction---a powerful pull over which, we tell ourselves, we exercise little control. Love is something we “fall into” or, by the same token, “fall out of.” The Greeks gave this experience a name. “Eros”, they called it. Maybe the term “romance” covers it best; a heady, wonderful thing and a gift of God in its own way, except that the concept never appears in the NT. It’s not that our Christian ancestors didn’t understand passion, for them it was a matter of instinct that needed little discussion. Their concern, and what Paul writes about today, is something completely different.

As we heard today, the Christians of Corinth were a gifted bunch but as can be the case with talented people, they remained woefully insecure. There were shouting matches about who was in charge, about whose gifts mattered. Key among the shouters were those exhibiting an outburst of heavenly tongues, surely a sign of God’s favor. Paul tried to lower the decibel level of the argument, first by reminding them last week of how a body works and how each part has its place. Then he urges them to seek the highest gift, “agape”, which is love as God sees it without which, speaking in angelic tongues is but clashing cymbals.

Simply stated, love as Paul speaks of it here isn’t “dong what comes naturally”. Paul has no attachment to the joys we call romance. Paul’s kind of love takes every ounce of maturity; hard work over a lifetime, waking up every morning asking God for the grace to help you love, despite others and despite yourself. Christian love, then, is not for sissies. So, seek romance, enjoy the valentine season but do this too. Ask yourself, how much self-discipline there is in your relationships for self-discipline is actually love, translated into action. Feelings have precious little to do with it for passion without discipline always leads to tears.

Real love is not a human achievement but a divine gift. So we pray today that we be given the grace to love one another as God has loved each of us, completely, committedly forever. In this place, love is a gift and it takes three; it takes someone to offer love, someone to receive it. It also takes God.

Deacon Kevin Ray
